The total of 1542 species here recorded amounts to over a quarter of the 5951 species listed as British by Kloet and Hincks (1976). New species for the area can readily be added even from comparatively well-worked families, and in the less familiar groups there is the chance of obtaining species new to Britain.

Additional species which come to my notice will continue to be published in the annual Recorder's Reports for Entomology of the Reading Naturalist.
